

AOLE	Subject	Year	Assessment
Humanities	History	7	To what extent did the Roman empire create a long term legacy on Britain?

Progression Table
Progression Indicator	Knowledge	Skills
Excelling	I know why certain inventions have been long term or short term. I know how to analyse a source and understand the interpretation that is presented in the source. I know how to construct a balanced argument using the interpretation in the source.	I have analysed the source and explained the interpretation of the source, I have also argued for and against the interpretation in the source. I have explained how Roman inventions have left both a short term and long term legacy on Britain and have written a conclusion coming to a final substantiated judgement on the question.
Advancing	I know why certain inventions have been long term or short term. I know how to analyse a source and start to understand the interpretation that is presented in the source.	I have analysed the source and explained the interpretation of the source. I have explained how Roman inventions have left both a short term and long term legacy on Britain and have written a conclusion coming to a final judgement on the question.
Securing	I know various Roman inventions that have had a long term and short term legacy on Britain. I know how to analyse a source and how to integrate it into my answer.	I can describe the different inventions that were created by the Romans and have explained whether these inventions had a long term or short term effect. I started to consider both sides of the argument and started to analyse the interpretation in the source.
Beginning	I know either short term or long term inventions of the Romans and can suggest whether or not they have left a legacy on Britain.	I can describe some of the different inventions that were created by the Romans and have started to explain whether these inventions had a long term or short term effect.

